Bunny

Six or seven years ago (David Quirk's memory is terrible) comedian and actor David Quirk with writer and performance artist Benjamin Cittadini staged a new play in Melbourne. The play was, and is, called Bunny.

In the vein of local Melbourne theater group, Ranters, Bunny draws on the dialogue driven scripts by the brilliant playwright Raimondo Cortese. Creating a work that is confronting, sometimes funny, sometimes violent and sometimes special.

As a stand up comedian, David Quirk has performed his absurd and dark craft everywhere from London to Helsinki(!) to Indianapolis (?) and now it feels right to be back in Melbourne for the Fringe with a cruel and unusual Love Story about men.

"Uneasy, half hostile, full of non-sequiturs, hidden meanings and blank spots"

Like all men.
