Mark Butler Grammar Don't Matter on a First Date

A comedy show for all those people who have broken up over a misused apostrophe. 8 shows only.

Mark once broke up with a girl over a misused apostrophe.

Another one of his relationships failed because of a subject-verb disagreement.

In fact, all of Mark's relationships have struggled because he is such a stickler for grammar (you know the type).

So, who has the problem: the grammar slobs or the grammar snobs?

In this critically-acclaimed comedy show, Mark Butler explains how your grasp of grammar can affect your chance of romance.

A show for those intelligent people who like words, and those stupid enough to go on blind dates.

"Butler whips the audience into gales of laughter ... 50 minutes of pure comedy gold. 5 stars." - Herald Sun
"50 minutes of brilliance and sheer entertainment ... from the moment he steps out you are totally engaged. The material is topical and Butler is edgy and downright hilarious. His timing and delivery is perfect – a first-rate performer." - The Pun
"Mark Butler constructs a hilarious show, and teaches you something at the same time. There aren't many comedians who can teach you so effectively and have you in tears of laughter at the same time. Butler is one of those few!" - Crikey
