Max Attwood and Paul Culliver in No Particular Order

Max Attwood and Paul Culliver are better at comedy than Muhammad Ali was at boxing. Or comedy. Featuring two of Melbourne's best new comic talents in their Fringe debut, 'Max Attwood & Paul Culliver in No Particular Order' will deliver two fresh and innovative stand up sets, in no particular order.

After working together on the Antenna Award-winning television program 'The Inquiry' on Channel 31, Max and Paul have teamed up again to create two entirely unconnected half hours of comedy.

As a 22 year old performer, Max Attwood doesn't pretend to know how the world works. Instead, he's content to look on in glee as it presents its nonsense to him. Whether it's the intricacies of children's television or the fun parts of dying, Max brings his acerbic wit and funny hair to any topic.

Paul Culliver has been clean and sober for 22 years, though his infectiously energetic and dangerously excitable nature makes that hard to believe. In his heightened state, Paul will explore what it's like being straight in a world that thinks he's gay, try to explain his phone-bill and examine the quirks of the Dewey Decimal System.

Performing at the Portland Hotel in the heart of the CBD, 'Max Attwood & Paul Culliver in No Particular Order' is your opportunity to catch these future comedy megastars before they sell out and get a high-paying Breakfast radio gig.
