Party for a Living Shine Today!

Teatcorp™'s celebrated Life Aesthetics® program comes to Melbourne! You've seen the edu-mercials, you've heard about the scented candles. Now, Party for a Living is your chance to experience the phenomenon Hollywood stars are calling 'vital'. In a one-woman show written and performed by Kirsten Law and directed by Catherine Dwyer, Party for a Living means 'innovative homewares' in four different languages.

The Life Aesthetics® summer 2011 home decor collection is ripe for launching and company rep Erin is very proud to be its conduit. A keen saleswoman, Erin has flourished under the Teatcorp™ banner. But behind her charming demeanour lies a mysterious past and the seed of demented ambition. Through a seminar presentation and 'informative' feature videos, Party for a Living unfolds Erin's story and explores the unusual philosophies of Teatcorp™ CEO, Paulette Flapfowler.

With influences that span feminist texts, religious manifestos and Tupperware® catalogues, Party for a Living is an allegory for our times.

Kirsten Law is a writer and performer whose credits include helming The Thousands' bar review column in The Age and playing a vet nurse on Bed of Roses. Party for a Living is her second solo creation and follows MICF 2010's Prolifia.

Together with director Catherine Dwyer, Kirsten is committed to creating insightful, relevant and challenging comedic performances. Their shared interests in feminism, marketing and religion combine in Party for a Living, where the fumbblings of a vulnerable naïf shed light on companies that target female customers and exploit human insecurities.

"Kirsten Law delights in portraying society's stranger characters, lovingly crafting them and offering them up for our own delight." - The Adelaide Advertiser
