Quadraphonic Kaleidoscope

This Is Siberian Husky welcome you to a perfectly abnormal night of sketch and invigorated absurdity - Quadraphonic Kaleidoscope, as debuted at the 2011 Melbourne Comedy Festival. A hilarious, off-kilter ride through the playground of the comically insane, prepare for the odd, restless and quite unhinged - This Is Siberian Husky.

A collage of sketch, monologue and short twisted narratives with quadraphonic sounds that are only audible by sight, This Is Siberian Husky present a patchwork quilt of daytime nightmares and late night dreams wrapped in plastic and labelled as sketch comedy.

This Is Siberian Husky otherwise known as Melbourne comic duo Simon Godfrey (writer, Good News Week) and Dan Allemann (writer/performer, Barnaby Flowers) take the stage by force to parade their oddly scented brand of comedy in this sketch extravaganza guaranteed to make you question the validity of any humorous form not created on the wings of synthesisers.

Quadraphonic Kaleidoscope calls to the neglected poor, lonely and bizarre sods who seek their jollies from the more unruly and peculiar end of the comedic spectrum, welcoming all with open arms and wild, flailing legs.

An unpredictable 70 minute pinball bounce through a world of eccentric characters and ridiculous scenarios, "Quadraphonic Kaleidoscope" as shouted from passing gondolas in the night is here to woo you, and does so, screeching madly through a megaphone - This Is Siberian Husky.

"mad, ridiculous and sadistic -- off-beat humour at its best." - The Herald Sun
"Brilliant. 5/5" - RHUM
"fun and silly and beguiling." - Australian Comedy Review
