That's Me In The Distance

Ten years ago, Spencer Tunick convinced over 4,000 Melburnians to pose naked on a cold morning. "That's Me In The Distance" is a play written by Rossleigh Brisbane about this event.

"That's Me In The Distance" traces five characters and their decision to pose in the photo. Written by Rossleigh Brisbane, creator of "The Charles Manson Variety Hour", "Snap!", "48 Hours (without Eddie Murphy)". the play was first performed in 2002.
